1920_CSCM23_Designing-in Trust, Understanding and Negotiation

Week 6

Dr Adam Wyner

AI and Law/Regulating AI

Practical

Bring your laptop to class.

Before the practical session, you should have read the Responsible AI Policy Framework.

You should also have done preliminary research on the AI and Law/LegalTech topics (below) in order to get an idea about the topic, how it is applied, and how it works.

In other words and for example, do a Google search on terms such as "legaltech contracts" (or similar). You might, for example, come up with https://www.luminance.com/. Try to get as much info on a system does and how it works.

Once you have done your preliminary research on AI and Law/LegalTech topics, consider the extent to which the system addresses the framework.

On the day of the practical, you will break into small (3-4 people) groups, share your research, discuss your understanding of the Framework, then write a short brief as a Word document on your findings. A representative will present your findings to the class. You will submit the group findings in the Word document, which will be shared as a class resource.

AI and Law/LegalTech Topics
Access to justice
Document review
e-Discovery
Contracts
Court case prediction
Legal compliance